

Ancient Scribe

Game 10 November 1009

The major news this month is the fall of Killet. The settlement of Killet has long been established, and for many years has been under the control of the Lascivii. In that time it has grown from a provincial outback into large bustling centre for both commerce and culture. In recent years it has contributed greatly to funding and the feeding of the army. In return the village and its growing population have been protected by an ever growing level of fortification. This gave stability to the village and the district. However, the Savage Intent have been busy in the area, gaining intelligence and looking at the economic success of Killet with envy. This month, the savage Intent sent a large force to capture the village. The Lascivii army had moved from the village leaving a few local defenders to man the ramparts but this was nowhere near enough to prevent the fall of the village into Savage Intent hands. Losses to the attackers were minimal while all who raised arms against them were destroyed. The defences of this village mean that a counter attack will have to be a very considerable force indeed to defeat a heavily fortified army of such strength.

Jason's Bit

I suppose the clash of the Titans is now in the making with others as innocent and not so innocent by standers. When the Lascivii decide enough is enough, we should see epic battles. I look forward to the coming war with some satisfaction.

Ancient Empires has been running for about 6 years with the current game. I think it might be a good idea to look to the future a bit and see if anyone wants to start another game of AE based upon the current software design. Probably a new map and some changes from what I have learned about the way the game develops. Of course this will not mean the end of the current game, but the future beckons.

Company Commander is the game of the moment, with players from Australia and the US making it a truly International game. I hope that more of you can try the game, as the downloads of the rules and map are free.

Ok, that's it for another month.

Jason.
