Game 10 October 1005

The Savage Intent have indeed this month returned to the savagery that has made them so famous. A large army numbering around a Legion have attacked the Lascivii again, this time at the settlement of Varak. The lack of any response over the months must tell the Savage Intent leaders that they have a passive enemy to their front. The villagers seem to have failed to rush to the defence of their settlement, leaving the enemy to occupy the defences, surely a mistake on the part of the Lascivii, who must now launch a counter attack against a heavily defended location. We will see what the future has in store for these great empires.
