Game 11 March 2010

TTC Modifier = 1.4

This month has seen an escalation of the confrontation between the Southern factions and the Sons of Minerva.

The Partido De Unidad forces have bypassed the main defence line at Delgur by landing commandoes at Lojas. The village was undefended but the stocks of goods were destroyed by the raiders before they were withdrawn. A clever attack designed to deny the Sons of Minerva the production from that month. The attackers suffered no losses in the raid.

The Molteni have advanced towards Delgur and used their 105 mm guns to bombard the defenders of the village. While the guns are capable weapons that can inflict heavy damage the training of the attackers was shown to be less than full. Forward observation seems to have failed to direct fire and the bombardment was scattered and caused little serious loss but quite a bit of collateral damage. Despite an attempt by the Sons of Minerva at some counter battery fire the Molteni forces suffered no losses.

Jason's Bit

Quite a bit happening with the game this month. Firstly there is the training update.

You can now order three types of training at the same location and tell the camp how many and what type of unit you want trained.

The turn sheets have been updated and are ready for download off the Web site. This gives you a great deal of flexibility when you order training.

I have also revised the Illegal activity. It should be much more profitable now but the Political Influence penalty still applies. There is a bonus that has been set at 50% for all players. This can of course be improved with some effort.

Special actions at the moment seemed to be a bit under funded. More investment will give you better results.

Training for a mission will give better results. You cannot order an air strike without having the pilots train in that skill, and the ground crew training in equipping the aircraft. The same applies for other operations. Almost every aspect of the game has a skill level.

Ok, that's it for another month.

Jason.
